Who We Are

The California Arts Project (TCAP) is a collaborative, statewide network of classroom teachers and university scholars with the mission of improving teaching and learning in dance, music, theatre, visual arts, and in arts, media, and entertainment. As the state subject matter project for the visual and performing arts and career arts, media, and entertainment, TCAP’s network of teacher leaders advocate for and strive to ensure access for all California students to a sequential, comprehensive, and excellent standards-based arts and career education. An education that includes content, literacy and process-rich learning in the arts will prepare California students to lead creative and collaborative communities and workplaces across California.

Over the course of the year, participants will:

- Collaboratively design a standard based teaching unit using the Understanding by Design (UbD) model
- Understand and utilize the CA Common Core Content Literacy Standards for Technical Subjects in their unit design
- Understand and utilize New CA ELD Standards to deepen students academic language and discourse
- Engage in the Japanese Lesson Study process as part of the field-test
- Evaluate and refine their cadre’s unit
- Engage in the creative process as artists through the exploration of a Creative Inquiry
- Become informed about current arts education issues, requirements, research and leadership
- Join TCAP’s Professional learning community

For an additional fee Extended Education Credit is available through California State University, San Bernardino for institute participants.

The Collaborative Design Institute is a rigorous, year-long institute. The purpose of the institute is to bring together outstanding visual and performing arts and career arts educators in cadres of professional learning communities.

Each cadre designs and field-tests a standards-based visual arts, performing arts or A, M, & E unit in their classrooms and utilizes lesson study processes to examine and improve student learning.

The Conceptual Framework for the Institute includes:

- California Visual and Performing Arts Framework and Content Standards
- Common Core Content Literacy for Technical Subjects
- New CA ELD Standards
- New National Core Arts Standards
- Revised California Career Technical Education Model Curriculum Standards
- Wiggins and McTighe’s Understanding by Design
